THE CHAPEL SANCTUARY
Grad Highlights

The Class of '44 has been one of distinction. It is the largest on record at this school.

For the first time in school history the Seniors had a Graduation Dance, called the "Purple Prom".

Having to divide their time at home between their studies and part-time employment, the men of '44 have done their share in the war effort on the home front.

Others have offered their services to their countries, viz.: John Alexander, (U.S.N.); Al. Appleton, (U.S.A.A.F.); D. Bradley, (R.C.A.F.); W. Carey, (U. S. N. A. C.); L. Donohue, (U.S.N.A.C.); M. Kennedy, (U.S.N.); J. McCabe, (U. S. N. A. C.); J. W. Maguire, (R.C.N.V.R.); D. Nanry, (U.S.N.A.C.); R. Rooney, (U. S. N. A. C.); and G. Weber, (U.S.N.).

Members of the Graduating Class also distinguished themselves in the field of sports. J. Ferrara, J. Maguire and R. Rooney were chosen for the All-City Football Team. Five other Grads received honourable mention. The Senior Hockey team, sparked by Paul Monforton, took the city championship. B. Hogan starred on the Senior Basketball team, which lost the City Championship by a small margin.

Years from now, as you read this page, you will likely recall fellows like L. Seguin, H. Hoberg, R. Dec, G. Bruette, M. Noonan and E. Awrey, who all helped to make the class what we all wanted it to be.

The thanks of the Class of '44 is due the Executive and to Father Crowley for the interest shown in all Grad activities.

—Vincent Crowley, '44.

The Catholic Press Exhibit

"In the shoreless storm-harrowed ocean of the world and its philosophies of life, the Catholic Press should stand as a seer and a prophet."—Pius XII.

Sponsored by the High School Library, and most generously assisted by Mr. S. J. Paulus, a Press Exhibit was held in the parlours of the Administration Building during the month of February. This exhibit attempted to portray the work and activities of the Catholic in the world of to-day. Its purpose was not merely to be a quiet presentation of what has been done, but also to arouse interest in what lies before the Catholic boy of our time.

PROSE AND POETRY
BLACK SUN
By Paul Boisvert
Peace reigned over the countryside, as the sun smiled benevolently over the horizon. Almost reluctantly, the waned moon dipped in a final salute, and silently sank behind the mountains. Heralding the dawn, a cock crew lustily, waking the people from their slumber. The world slowly bestirred itself; the hamlet arose. While the men set forth to their daily work, the women began their household tasks. After breakfast, the children gambolled in the ever-warming sun; and life began another day.

Noon came: the people ate, while the little hamlet lay in peace and quiet under the blazing sunshine. Then, from the East there came a low hum, as could be made by a distant swarm of bees. Growing to a droning noise, it became louder and irritatingly insistent. Coming now, full and fast, it took form and rapidly filled the valley, threatening even to blot out the sun itself. Then, seemingly out of the blazing orb, there soared... the bombers.

The winged birds of destruction belched out their loads, which screamed down in a song of death. As they struck the ground, gigantic explosions burst upon the ear. The hamlet was enveloped in a flying mass of debris, as ogre-fanged ogre, the bombs fell in an increasing rain. The rumbling of crumbling buildings, and the blast of high explosives, shook the earth. The screams of the dying and injured were mercifully eclipsed by the declamatory detonations. Houses heaved up in a flash of flame, and disappeared into nothing. Fire streaked against the sky over the devastated villages, as the ground rocked and vibrated from the terrific conundrums of the bursting missiles. Above this scene of terror and upheaval, the planes circled as if gloating over their success. Then, satisfied, they slowly wheeled in to the distance.

The entire hamlet lay leveled to the ground and completely gutted with fire. This is war.

SHORT FEATURES

THE PRESS ROOM POUNCE
By Omer Lamothe

Turning out an issue of the A.H.S. Reporter involves much more work than many of us think. Here is a short account of the story behind one of these immortal masterpieces. After the last copy of the Reporter has been handed out to the eager students, everybody on the staff breathes a deep sigh of relief. Nothing to worry about for four or five days, except Algebra, Trig, French and final exams. Then one day a little man comes along, and posts the assignments for the various reporters to cover. Oh unhappy day!

Things start rolling (besides dice), and little by little material begins to trickle in. The Features are usually the first articles in, but the last to be considered. Not far behind comes the brilliant work of the little man, who is the spark of life that fans the flames that cause every issue to be a success, namely: the editor. With sharp glances and reproachful looks, he keeps the press room working in smooth order, and in this way the poor reporters turn out their best. Finally the sports staff struggles in about twelve hours after the deadline, and hand in their crumpled articles to the half-hysterical assistant-editor, who is trying to find out why he is not the editor. The new Snooping with Scoop looks around with a bewildered expression on his face, and waits to see if there is anything he can do for anybody, including emptying the wastepaper basket.

Another ball occurs when the printer is franticly trying to straighten out the strange assortment of typewritten literature that is forwarded to him. Then the staff is again rounded up, with a little trouble to the editor, who must carry a police whistle, and the writers are forced to read their own work. This is the hardest task they are ever subjected to.

When this is done, the little man works for in the dark hours of the night and sometimes does not even bother to eat his supper. The assistant can usually be found in the near vicinity doing his best to keep the bottle of mustard full, as the editor uses up gallon after gallon. Sometimes later the editor, with an exasperated look on his face, emerges with a dummy copy of the Reporter clutched in his hands. Again the printer goes to work, and within two days eight hundred evidences of genius are delivered to the school. Again a sigh is heard throughout the school, for the staff has nothing to do, except worry about Algebra, French, Trig, and final exams for four or five days.
PERSEVERANCE

By John D. McA/pin&-V Year

When trouble overcasts the sky of life
And fills your heart to bursting with its gloom,
Be patient in the bearing of your strife
And in your heart new happiness will bloom.

Sink not into the depths of dark despair,
If from this life’s steep ladder you should fall,
You’ll find God’s love and mercy everywhere.
If you’ll but search and trust, He’ll grant you all.

And when you’ve set your goal for happiness
No matter how beset with trials, ne’er flee.
Think not of failure, fight till your success;
In perseverance you will find the key.

DARK CLOUDS

Dark clouds won’t stay dark,
They’ll brighten up soon.
Behind those dark clouds,
You may find the moon.

Shining and beaming
In Heaven on high.
Glistening and gleaming
Way up in the sky.

So don’t just give up
If things should go wrong;
Whistle, be hoppy,
And sing a gay song.

LISTEN TO ME

By Robert Venney—5th Year

You young and free, listen to me,
To you great words I have to say
About your lives, all yours to live;
For as you live from day to day,

Build up some worth of things of earth,
Of things of mind, of heaven too.
The needs of life must be sustained,
But earn some knowledge, give God His due.

Don’t let this life your soul destroy,
Commerce “Repress your noble rage”.
Let thoughts, unchained by habit, soar
Ungrayed, undulled by earthly wage.

But if a burden you must bear,
And if your mind a toil must plod,
And if your soul a path must beot,
Then let that path lead up to God.
BLESSED VIRGIN MERCIFUL

By Robert Moler, '44

I

A noble flowing sonnet floods my heart
With love and hope for better worlds to come,
And dyes my eyes to hope and gloom. But some
There are that cause a pleasant pen to dart
In graceful lines—but guileful teach the art.
These gorgeous lies make simple hearts to burst,
Or noble minds to turn a'gley and numb,
When filled with rashness—truth in only part.

The shades o' Shakespeare now are lacquered o'er
With superficial filmy sentiment.
Now intellect and conscience wage a war
Against the literary bottleneck.
Of sticky love and twisted theory—Greek!
Of flaming words having knowledge scant.

II

A sonnet frescoed with a high ideal,
And crossed or flooded by a stream of blood,
The essence Life; and with a white rose bud,
The sign of purity, and now the strength of steel
To stand for truth, all burning with true seal,
While bringing beauty to the sons of God,
As cool and fresh as meadows glossy sod—
All this is the song of God and peace—I feel.

Tis not for songs of active, for
All these are like the writhing fires of Hell,
Impressive—yes—but only in their gore.
A sonnet is more like an azure well,
With hidden limpid pools by the score
That cause the heart of man to rise and swell.

III

Now thou, with goal set clearly afar,
I scan the heavy seas of inspiration,
Forever seeking that one creation,
Which faces raging time without a mar
'Gainst: beauty, goodness, mildness—o'er ocean star!
But hold! My wandering pen has done the action
For me. The Ocean Star, queen of notions.
Oh gentle queen—the guide of wanderers . . .

. . . O design to smile down from thy heav'ly throne
Upon my labors, my most humble work.
For though my writing proceeds, I must own,
Is lacking sadly, and my pen does shrink
To set down lines exciting thee—tuned
So sweetly—yet I write—please bless my work.

IV

The sky is azure. Billowy white clouds
Are drifting to some dreamy fleecy goal.
The ground is fresh and green like coral.
The trees have donned their lacy summer shrouds.
All nature sings—concert—from the mounds
And meadows' weeping willows. Man's new soul
Springs up, while children dance 'round the May-pole,
And radiance from a new-born sun abounds.

All nature strives to make a wakened world
More beautiful with thoughts and tears of love.
Till all the earth is fantasy unfurled.
Now, slowly, ever-turning nature doth
A halt, when God's works are best apparel'd.
To hail, with May, the Queen of Heaven above.
IT TAKES SO LITTLE
By Lauren Masse—1C

It takes so little to make us sad,
just a slighting word or a doubting sneer,
just a scornful smile on some lips held dear,
And our footsteps buy, though the goal seemed near,
And we lose the courage and hope we had—

It takes so little to make us glad,
just the cheering clasp of a friendly hand,
just a word from one who can understand,
And we finished the task we long had planned,
And we leave the doubt and the fear we had—
So little it takes to make us glad.

MEMORY OF A ROSE
(A blind man's tribute to a rose)
By Bennie Jone Merideth—IA

Mine eyes they seeketh light in everlasting day.
Thy sounds, thy winds, what tricks on me they play.
They think I see not, I do, and it is true.
Why must they trick me? Why may I not find you?

I will seek to me the day is right, mine eyes are closed.
When daylight brings no colour to me, I seeketh out the rose.
The sun is only here for jokes on me to play.
I know not what life really is, for I've never seen the day.

So when thou seeketh out that quiet secluded nook,
Where the water runs so gently in the calm brook,
If you should see a rose, stop, and touch one just for me;
For, as you know, to me the day is right. I do not see.

MY MOM
By James Talbot—2a

My Mom is all the world to me
Although she's strict as strict can be,
About what time I'm in at night
And doing only what is right.

When I was young, she taught me
The prayers I say on bended knee;
She also taught me how to talk
And with her help I learn'd to walk.

Though years have turned her hair to gray
I seem to love her more each day,
And if I search the world around
A Mom like her could not be found.
