

University of Windsor

Scholarship at UWindor

Research Result Summaries

2020

Balance of Choices Involving Chance: Psychometric Evaluation

Joan Craig

craigl@uwindsor.ca

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholar.uwindsor.ca/research-result-summaries>

Consistent with the TCPS 2 (4.7) this is a research summary provided to participants and should not be considered a formal publication of results.

Recommended Citation

Craig, J. (2020). Balance of Choices Involving Chance: Psychometric Evaluation. Retrieved from <https://scholar.uwindsor.ca/research-result-summaries/94>

This Completed Summary is brought to you for free and open access by Scholarship at UWindor. It has been accepted for inclusion in Research Result Summaries by an authorized administrator of Scholarship at UWindor. For more information, please contact scholarship@uwindsor.ca.

Balance of Choices Involving Chance: Psychometric Evaluation

This study is one in a series of studies that were being used in the creation of a new scale of measurement for risk perception. This specific study had the main objective of performing psychometric evaluations to determine the reliability and validity of the new scale. Preliminary analyses suggest that the new scale has internal reliability and has provided evidence toward establishing validity of the scale for assessing risk perception in some domains.